Cradlepoint Grant Assistance Program

Find and Get Connected to Technology Solutions Your Agency Needs

Grants are a way for agencies to receive funding beyond the limits of operational budget. They can help bridge the gap between agency resources and the need for technology solutions to help serve the community. When budgets can't be stretched, grants are meant to be a solution and can be a boon for agencies looking to utilize technology for operational and service efficiencies. Grants can help pay for hardware, software, and IT services that are much needed by frontline responders.

Cradlepoint is sponsoring a grant finding/assistance program for law enforcement, fire rescue, EMS, and healthcare agencies as part of the Cradlepoint First Connect initiative. This program is powered by PoliceOne, FireRescueOne, EMSGrantsHelp, and GovGrantsHelp, the largest network of grant resources for responders, to help agencies obtain funding for the technology solutions they require.

What is a Grant?

Grants fund solutions to problems within a community. Grants are available to fund a focused project to make something better within the applicant's community, seed funding for projects or programs, and are one of several options for alternative funding sources for agencies. It is important to know that grants are a legal binding contract.

What Grants Are Not

Grants are not a loan as grants do not have to be paid back. They are also not a short-term purchase solution as the typical grant cycle is 9–12 months. Each agency will go through a reporting and matching process; unfortunately, not all grant requests are successful.

In a recent national survey, over 67% of police & fire departments reported significant budget cuts.¹

We want to use the best and most current technology to provide services to our citizens in a manner that is both cost-effective and efficient to the fire department and to the taxpayers.”
